HOT WATER WORSE THAN FLAMES. Nathan Oskowitz and his wife, Sarah, Polish Hebrews,

have carried on the manufacture of gold paint in their rooms on the top floor of the five-story tenement-house No. 148 Forsythist. One of the chief ingredients of the paint is turpentine. About 9 a, m. yesterday Mrs. O-kowitz went into the cellar to fill a bottle with turpentine from a three-gallon can. She had a lighted candle with her. After the bottle was partly full it fell and was broken on the cellar floor. The turpentine that was spilled caught fire from the candle, and in a oment the woman's dress was ablaze. She ran up states and out into the rear yard, screaming for help. A door from Charles Roffman's bakery opens into the yard. Mrs. Roffman, catching sight of the blazing comm. seized a kettle of boiling water and ran toward Mrs. Oskowitz ran back into the house and went through the half to the street. Mary Perona, Mrs. Roffman's servant, went out the front way and threw a skirt about Mrs. Oskowitz in the effort to smother the flames. Mrs. Roffman arrived on the sidewalk with her kettle and flung the hot water over both women. The flames in Mrs. Oskowitz's clothes were extinguished, but she was scalded in places where the fire had not touched her.

Then Mrs. Roffman, who is an extremely vigorous person weighing about 300 pounds, went into the cellar to tackle the times there with another kettle of hot water. Several men, who had been attracted Brooklyn; John Dundon, of Jersey City, and John to the place by the screams of Mrs. Oskowitz, looked on while Mrs. Roffman flung hot water over the burning turpentine on the cellar floor. When she had got the fire out, one of the men bravely rushed into the cellar and carried out the turpentine can, which was not An ambulance carried Mrs. Oskowitz to the Gouver-neur Hospital. The surgeons there said she had received extensive burns on the body and might die from her injuries.
